PASTOR AND PEOPLE. Extract from the Second Annual Sermon to the Fifth Sabbath-day Baptist Church, Dec. 24, 1865.

There are men so situated that their position in church relations is not so favorable as it might be. The Church ordained a pastor in order that they might have the gospel preached to them. But others, constituting the larger class of Christians, far, are so situated that it is easy to constitute churches. This church constitution is the result of economy in the divine plan.

The minister must not only be able to teach with ability, and divide skillfully between truth and falsehood, meeting out truth in due season, according to the demand, but he must be one of the people, in sympathy with their sorrows, and ever ready to lead in deeds of kindness, and enterprises of benevolence, and ever ready and able to represent the church on the broad arena of social, intellectual, and political life.

But, thank God, there are in every generation a few who love the truth so well that they will joyfully receive it, by whatever method presented. And whenever they see the minister at work to find out some new truth, or dress an old one in some attractive garb, they go right to praying, "Lord help him!" and when they get it, they are so glad that they would not know it if the minister had made half a dozen awkward gestures in presenting it.

By the utterance. He who really loves the truth, and the souls of men which that truth will save, if they can have it, will not be satisfied with never-half-motherly in the utterance, but will seek language that will utter it, as nearly as language may, in all its fullness.

through the gospel which it is to proclaim. It is the church which is to proclaim the gospel. The ministry is their agency. If they, by their devotion to the cause, love of the truth, and of souls, on the part of your agent, you can not be expected to be less devoted yourselves. You employ the minister to lead you in the gospel work; not to do that work for you. He must teach you duty; you must do the duty; he can not do it. He may show you the duty of Sabbath-keeping, of praying in your families; but he can not keep your Sabbath, nor perform your family worship for you.

Thus, all through the year, it is the minister's duty to teach the people how to live, and to live right himself. His precepts may be supposed to be backed up by his example. Thus teaching and thus living, the result to himself in God's estimate, will be proportionate to his faithfulness; but its results on the people will be proportionate to their moral faithfulness.

Nor is this all. The people can no more innocently hear preaching carelessly, than the minister can preach carelessly. They are as much responsible for how they hear as he for how he speaks. It is not the preaching, but the hearing and accepting of the gospel, that saves men.

But it is well to remark, that since ministers are but men, they will all have faults, and that the church owes strength to their weakness. Suppose a minister to be weak in some one point, say in knowing how to manage the finances or the discipline of the church; it is hardly supposable that there are not, in a church of ordinary size, enough financiers and disciplinarians to remedy the defect, and in time to teach the minister these important lessons.

Again, since the work that properly belongs to him is enough to tax all his energies, and absorb all his time, the Head of the church has ordained that his physical necessities shall be liberally supplied. This appointment and duty of the church is clear in both the Old and New Testaments, as is the nature of the case, it must be so. If it were not, the laborer is worthy of his hire.

By the church, and faithfully fulfilling its part of the contract to work together for Christ, many a minister has been made large and rich, and has been made small. A minister who has been saved, who never heard more than a middling sermon preached. They joyfully accepted it.

between lofty and steep hills. In 1830, the population was 700. With the opening spring, the mines returned. There is a well-known fish called the sucker, which, early in the spring, goes up rivers and streams. In the fall it goes back. It is in Galena that the people of Illinois first got the name of suckers.

The first miners were Americans. In those days the ore was found on the surface; that is, by digging from three to forty feet. Often veins opened on the tops of hills, to the light of day, when a cart, backed in and the mineral shoveled up, or it was the level ground, or it was the level ground, or it was the level ground.

There were no smelting furnaces in those days. A huge heap of logs was made in a little hollow; the mineral was piled on the top, a fire kindled, and the lead ran out on the ground. This was a most unhealthy occupation.

Mr. S. tells us that he went to the extent of human endurance—he has no idea that he could have sustained himself three hours longer. Although he realizes $500 on the bet, and $280 as admission fees, yet ten times that amount would not induce him again to make a like effort.

A like feat was performed in California a few years since. In Baltimore it was attempted by a man who died in the 97th hour.
