winter of 1835-6. When Wisconsin was organized into a Territory, in 1836, there were at least eight such schools in operation...

Another class of schools was early organized in Wisconsin, viz: The mission schools among the Indian tribes. The charge of these in a single instance was in the hands of the Government...

In July last, Rev. W. C. Whitford delivered an address before the State Teachers' Convention at Milwaukee, giving a "History of School Superintending in Wisconsin."

At the request of your Executive Committee I should prefer to attend the progress of the schools in our State. I have ventured to write on this subject a number of general interest...

The search, indeed, would be interesting if it revealed the schools of our State, and the germs of our own educational organization and management...

As might be expected, our first schools were opened in private families, and the task of hiring teachers, securing them, and sending them to the place of their duty, was performed by the heads of these families...

The next schools were established at the military posts in the State, which were three in number: Fort Howard, at Green Bay, Fort Crawford, at Prairie Du Chien, and Fort Winnebago, near Portage, Wis.

Very often both the dwelling and the school were formed. The dwellings were placed in the family of some person who was selected to secure a teacher and a room in a private house...

LIFE AMONG THE SHAKERS. The senior editor of the New York Observer has recently visited the Shaker settlement in Lebanon, New York. He publishes an interesting account of what he saw and heard...

In 1839, this Territorial school law was revised, and the office of Town Commissioners was abolished, and their duties were transferred to the Inspectors, who had bestowed upon them the additional power to listen to complaints against teachers...

This is the Shaker village. The elder, Frederick W. Evans is his name, is a tall, slim man, with a high forehead, mild eyes, benevolent face, and a kindly manner...

But the peculiar feature of the system is that they are separated from the world in the practice of celibacy. Not the forced celibacy of those who live apart from the other sex...

Near Green Bay, a Catholic mission was formed in 1830. It was aided somewhat by the Government and the State. The mission, in whom the school was maintained...

There is nothing, even in the speech of those who are always willing to take up an evil report, to justify a suspicion that the Shakers do not live as they profess. Their reputation in the world about the mission, in the west of the State, is that of honest, industrious, and worthy people...

By the terms of this law, each district elected three school officers—a clerk, a collector, and a superintendent. The clerk was elected for a term of one year, and his duty was to keep a list of all the children of the age of four and sixteen...

Of the sincerity of these people I have no doubt. They believe much of the simple gospel, and practice a number of the virtues the gospel requires. There are now in various parts of the United States eighteen societies of Shakers, in the same faith and order with those of the West.

sew up the legs of my trousers, so I put a stop to it, and concluded that six foot five would do for a fellow that couldn't afford the expensive luxury of a wife to make breeches for him. It was only the love for my mother that stopped my growth...

Three little bugs in a basket. Three little bugs in a basket, And one was yellow, and one was black, And one like me and you, and I, And they were all together...

CHANGES AND ORANGES. "I say, Mr. Conductor, when will the next train go to St. Louis?" "Eleven o'clock and thirty minutes-to-night, sir," was the gentleman's reply...

"Why in nat'r didn't you get us sooner?" "Fourteen hours ago, Chicago," said he to a brother "feller all right like; and the only thing that troubles me is my money—have'n't more to give."

"Now, gentlemen, 'tain't often I'm let to set on myself, after this fashion. But these old places, where I trapped when I was a boy, made me feel like a child again; and I felt like telling my youngsters here about the weather, I hope you will say 'twas worth it.'"

"That's a fact," said the first speaker, with a broad smile, "I've never seen a better fellow than you in my life, and I've never seen a better fellow than you in my life, and I've never seen a better fellow than you in my life."

Every Arab and Medina. This pilgrimage was undertaken for the first time since the day of the Prophet Mohammed, by a young man who had been in the army for some years, and who had seen much of the world...

"You must have been in luck, my friend," said an envoy with a long tunic, "I never saw a better fellow than you in my life, and I've never seen a better fellow than you in my life."

was pacified and made quiet by some chestnuts and a glowing bit of candied orange, and two bottles of champagne were brought back his hands full of pies, and distributed them among the weary group. A mother and seven children sat around the table, and the mother left the car at every stopping place, and returned more stupid and beastly each time, scolding the little tired, restless ones with a thick tongue, and glaring his furious eyes upon the poor grieved victim of his wife, like a tiger upon its prey...

"You may have the whole lot for that," was the answer of the drunkard, father, with a swine-like grunt. "It's a bargain," said the big man, "I'll take 'em all for five dollars."

WANTED—EVENINGS AT HOME.

There is no greater want in these times than the household of New England, at such evenings at home. I have lamented the loss of the old fashioned open fire place, with its cheerful wood fire roaring up the chimney, and its outposts of apples and cider. But they would do little good in these days, when nobody wants the old-fashioned fire place...

Christian associations and unions are doing much to copy down, for as they afford safe and pleasant retreats for strangers in the city, who are shut out from the privileges of the home circle, and lure the wandering from the temptations of vice...

When you meet with neglect, let it rouse you to exertion, instead of mortifying your pride. Set about lessening those defects which expose you to neglect; and improve those which are your great commandment and rest.

THE REAL WAY TO IMPROVE IS NOT so much to read; but, by finding out your weak points on any subject, and mastering them. True, it is most painful not to meet the kindness and affection you feel you have deserved, and have a right to expect from others; but it is better to receive kindness, and if you receive it, you cannot exert friendship with a cocked pistol.

BRAINS VS. LABOR.

The following beautiful passage is by the Rev. J. F. Corning. It will be appreciated by all "brain workers."

While I sit at my study table with my pen in hand, the fingers moving with tardy pace at the beckon of my brain, I hear, below my window, in the busy street, the monotonous rattle of a laborer's hoe upon the corral. While he hoes, he whistles; and by the clock strikes twelve, and then with ravenous appetite repairs to his bountiful yet venal table, and eats and drinks his fill, and pursues it till the setting of the sun.

When you meet with neglect, let it rouse you to exertion, instead of mortifying your pride. Set about lessening those defects which expose you to neglect; and improve those which are your great commandment and rest.

of grace should not be frustrated in the restoration of man. The conceptions of men, merely, were not prohibited in the second commandment, and therefore could not be sin, unless by a sinful purpose to detract from the dignity of the majesty on high.

On the Continent of Europe, the most remarkable event has been the revolution in Spain. This movement has been hailed by all the friends of religious liberty.

THE EAST AND THE WEST.

Of all the sectional divisions which men of superficial and contracted views are laboring to create, that between the East and the West seems to us the most dangerous and least expiable.

Between the North and the South, before the purifying process of war began, there was a natural division—an "irrepressible conflict"—growing out of the existence in the different sections of institutions which could not possibly be together in harmony.

PORTVILLE.

This society is situated in the pleasant and fertile valley of the Otsego, about midway between the villages of Ceres and Portville, and is in many respects a favorable location.

WESTLEY'S GRAVE-YARDS.

Rev. Frederick Davidson has been furnished for the Narragansett Weekly a series of articles on the Graves and Grave-Yards of Westley.

YEAR'S PROGRESS.

The January number of Christian Work, an English periodical, has the following review of the progress of the missionary work during the past year.

There is nothing strange in the idea, that a liberal, Christian editor, should write such a note to a correspondent with whose views and practices he agreed.

There is nothing strange in the idea, that a liberal, Christian editor, should write such a note to a correspondent with whose views and practices he agreed.

Most people, in reading this paragraph, will feel a disgust at the conceit which characterizes it. Some will perhaps say to the writer, as Job did to his friends.
