A church is gathered, that its members may assist each other in the struggle against sin, but lo ! they hurt each other. They help to sin, nay, more, they induce to sin, and by this be come a scandal and a stone of stumbling. Notice how, at such a time Satan exults, and how his kingdom flourishes. This is worse than putting our light under a bushel. Now if there be any church in the state described above, whose members read these words, know that they are not uttered in malice, but that while we write them our eyes fill with tears. We are grieved and full of sorrow when our Zion languishes.

Occasionally, a company of disci ples happen to fall in together, whose tendencies of thought and whose mental framework disqualify them for working together, and so they simply live to grieve and vex each other. This is especially unfortunate when there, happens to be among them no skillful and able leader. people circumstanced like these especially need a leader, one possessing peculiar qualifications, without reproach, full of spiritual power, and free from the taint of partisanship. Troubles like those mentioned above are rarely healed. They often descend from parent to child to the third and fourth generation who hate and in return are hated. But we do not wish to say that in cases like these, the grace of God is not sufficient for the working of a cure. If there are any troubled as above, let them fast and pray, searching their own hearts as in the presence of God, and cast therefrom ev. ery evil, until it is filled with all love. Also let each be careful how he judges another. The spirit that leads us to judge one another is a dangerous one. We are all of us sinners and have need of mercy, and this mercy we should show to others. Let it also be remembered that to men, equal in judgment and purity of motives, the same questions will appear differently, as: they are seen from different standpoints. It is impossiple that all persons should see the same questions in precisely the same light. How important, then. that there be in exercise a broad charity that can rise above our immediate surfoundings, and exercise a Christ-like generosity Another
