

THE NECESSITY OF RENDERING SERVICE TO GOD.

While it may be true that God's great plan of human redemption will go on irrespective of what we do or fail to do, and there is a sense in which God does not need our service, yet there is a sense in which it is equally true that he does need it.

There are those all around us who need our services, who need just the influence and inspiration that we may give them if we are true to our trust. A heart consecrated to God, burning with zeal for his cause, however humble its position in life, can but enkindle and inflame hearts that are brought in contact with it, and cause them to glow with religious fervor.

Who shall say that the Lord did not need the efforts of Martin Luther in order to bring about the Reformation? True, he might have brought it about in some other way, but did he not choose Martin Luther for that very work? and did he not, in view of that choice, need him to carry it forward?

The voyage was unanimously approved, and as I wrote him that they immediately proceed, and the money needed, should, at any time, be ready. I hope they have sailed; but how soon as possible.

My intimate acquaintance with the author for more than half a century, having been a collaborator with him in a very interesting period of our denominational history for many years, leads me to expect in his work an able and truthful record of events, which will be read with pleasure and profit by the denomination of which he has been so long an efficient minister, and by the Christian public; and which might otherwise be lost. He is a clear and forcible writer, and his book will be a valuable contribution to our denominational literature.

Mrs. Palmer experienced religion at an early age, and was for many years a member of the Seventh-day Baptist Church of Rock River, and at the time of her death was a member of the church of like faith at Milton Junction. She was a consistent and earnest Christian woman, honored and beloved by all who knew her. For several years past she has resided with her daughter, Mrs. S. L. Borden, of Springville, N.
